Immerse Yourself in the Enthralling Journey of John Schreiber's Masterpiece

Suspense Story Starters....

Your heart is pounding against your rib cage, your palms are sweaty and you turn another page. The antagonist is waiting around the corner for the unsuspecting protagonist. You wish you could do something to stop the protagonist from walking into the trap, but you can't. You are helpless, lost in the clutches of the writer. All you can do is turn another page...

If you've ever felt this way while reading, then the writer has done a great job of creating suspense. Every good story has an element of suspense, the part in the plot where you are hanging on the edge of your seat to see what will happen to the characters. A good suspense story makes your heart race, makes you jump, and even bite your fingernails. To build suspense, a good author will start at the beginning creating an element of danger, mystery, or foreshadowing causing the reader to ask questions and wonder what will happen next.

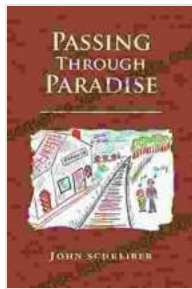

To create suspense, try one or two of these tricks:

1. Make the plot answer a pressing question such as "Who is that stranger lurking in the shadows?"
2. Create a likable protagonist that the reader wants to see succeed. Then create an equally unlikable antagonist who threatens the protagonist in some way.
3. Use foreshadowing at the beginning of the story to hint at what is to come.
4. Slow down or speed up the action to create that feeling of anticipation. The reader is waiting. Instead of having the protagonist simply open the door, make the reader wait as you give step-by-step details of the protagonist opening the door, step-by-step in what will seem like forever to the reader.
5. Use a cliff-hanger: leave the reader guessing about what might happen next.
6. Have a suspenseful ending that no one is expecting.

Choose one of these 13 story starters to begin your story...

1. I was trick-or-treating with my friend late one Halloween night, when we saw...
2. As I walked home from school that day, I couldn't help but notice that the old abandoned house looked a little different than usual...
3. As I watched the transformation in 2009, I knew that my friends would never believe me when I told them our new teacher was a werewolf...
4. When a black cat crossed my path one Autumn night, I knew I was in for a few scary surprises...
5. I was biking home from school, when I decided to take a short cut through the cemetery...
6. He's always been the mad scientist...
7. As I carefully entered the house, the door suddenly closed behind me...
8. My best friend dared me to knock on the door of the old ladies' house. As I did, the door slowly creaked open and a hand reached out...
